"A pleasurable, lightly satirical revel in sixties manners and music...
With bite, kick and hanky-panky" (Guardian).

This music spoof on the Saturday night rituals of seven pubescent seventeen year olds celebrates the eternal embarrassment of being a teenager. With an electric cross section of famous 60's numbers - Cliff and The Shads to Bob Dylan via The Beatles - girls in mini skirts and boys in Chelsea boots sing songs about teen traumas that sound like all those 60's hits you've heard before... An evening not to be missed!
